

Whig and Courier.

John S. Sayward, Editor.

THURSDAY, DEC. 23, 1853.

Our neighbor of the "Democrat" is out, as usual, in favor of the election of a Union man who is fat-footed, on the Baltimore form, and who has no talent, or suspicion of talent. It demands also that the resolution be a sectional and free soil party, and that the party of the Union and of the national democracy be the party of the Union and of the national democracy. The editor of the Bangor Democrat has been, ever since, only an almost alone, against the free soil tendencies and pretensions of his party, and now that he has the support of the Union and of the national democracy, he declares that nothing but taking these back tracks will or ought to do him.

Strongest evidence of true contrition and an ardent desire to return to the national party is now to be expected of the Union man, who, in this State, is what better way can they take their action and prove its sincerity than the election of the editor of the Democrat to the office of the Bangor Democrat? Would not his election cover the ground and render all the minor steps unnecessary? He is the embodiment of the Union and of the national democracy, and is the greatest former proponent of free soilism. Now he is glad to settle in the bosom of the Union and of the national democracy. The Democrat thus sketches the qualifications of the Senator.

A Democrat should be elected who stands upon the Baltimore platform, and who is in harmony with those of the national party and the President. The Union man, who is the embodiment of the Union and of the national democracy, is the greatest former proponent of free soilism. Now he is glad to settle in the bosom of the Union and of the national democracy. The Democrat thus sketches the qualifications of the Senator.

Central Congregational Parish.
The Central Congregational Parish, having completed their Vestry in the basement of the Church on French street, is about to occupy it for public worship until the audience room above is completed. The opening services will be on the first Sabbath in January, when services will be expected from Rev. Prof. Hitchcock, of Brunswick, and Rev. Prof. Shepard. As the seats are to be offered free to the community, and it is not probably known how extensive are the accommodations; and as there are frequent inquiries as to the final arrangements, it seems important to inform the public as to the present and prospective arrangements.

First—The arrangements of the House.
Secondly—The provision for preaching.
Thirdly—The ways and means.

The Vestry or Lecture room is above ground, well lighted and ventilated, is 62 by 40 feet—connected with the main body, 36 by 32 feet, and 28 by 24 feet, arranged with sliding doors, so the whole can be thrown together, and furnish accommodations for an audience of at least seven hundred. It is warmed by wood furnaces from the cellar, and lighted by gas. These rooms will be occupied for Sabbath school season, and the seats are offered to the public entirely free.

The church proper will probably be dedicated about next June. It will furnish 176 pews, and will combine in its interior arrangements all the modern improvements. No pains will be spared by the builders, in making the main audience room convenient and attractive.

Practical—The church has never had a pastor in form, but a most devoted and acceptable one in reality. Prof. Shepard took charge at the commencement, and although from his connection with the Theological Seminary, it has not been deemed expedient to install him formally as pastor, yet the Church and Parish regard him as their permanent minister. He has never signified his intention to withhold his services, and when this new house was projected, it was with the hope that Prof. S. would occupy its pulpit a certain portion of the time as associate preacher, as long as he should live. But his professional duties will not allow of his working so laboriously as he has done, and it is the intention of the Parish as soon as the finances shall allow, to settle a man who will take the responsibilities of the pastorate.

Ways and Means—The house is built by subscription, and is a gift to the Parish. No one will have to pay for a pew. Any one desiring to worship with the congregation must make up his mind what he is willing to pay for a seat. If he has a family, and desires to occupy a pew for the current year, and is willing to pay $3, $5 or $10, more or less, he can be accommodated, and here his responsibilities to the Parish will end. It is designed to make every thing relating to the pecuniary interest of the Parish voluntary, and to make it as near as possible, a free church.

With a beautiful church in the centre of the city, and a clergy of acknowledged intellectual and spiritual endowments, the Central Congregational Church hopes to bear an honorable part with its sister churches in diffusing a pure Christianity, and to stand as a higher standard than the churches of the city.
